

ABSTRACT

A benefits system is provided comprising: an employer system accessible by an employee; and a benefit provider system accessible from the employer system wherein the benefit provider system includes an interface system for accessing a plurality of service systems including at least an employer corporate stock plan system and a retirement plan system. The benefit system provides a single point of access for numerous systems and thus affords consolidated benefit information.